Shri. Hanamanth N. Bannur, Head, Department of English, welcomed the gathering. The YRC unit Programme Officer Smt. Megha Galagali presented a PPT which showcased the establishment of Red Cross Society and the deliberations of Geneva Conventions. She mentioned that since the inception of Red Cross, voluntary action has been its quintessence. She in her presentation told – “Henry Dunant believed that volunteering serves as a means in helping the society to bridge the gap between the crisis and the crisis management. The voluntary services rendered by Sir Jean Henry Dunant during the Battle of Solferino were the reason as to why he established Red Cross Society. Dunant published a book titled ‘The Memory of Solferino’ and circulated to the leaders of various states all over the world. After reading this book, Geneva Public Welfare Society helped him in his mission. A draft treaty called First Geneva Convention was signed on 12th August 1864 by 12 nations. Subsequently three more conventions were held”. The entire deliberations of all the four Geneva Conventions were explained in detail and the service of volunteers and need of volunteerism during wartime was highlighted to motivate students and orient themselves towards selfless services.

The principal of the college, Dr. Smt. J. S. Kawalekar in her presidential address spoke about the treaty and the Geneva Conventions which were a binding to the nations to provide medical assistance during any civilian wars of any country all over the world. Smt. M. M. Puranik, Lecturer, Department of Electronics, proposed vote of thanks. Miss. Samruddhi Barve, Lecturer, Department of English, compered the programme.
